Ladies Night Invitations from Greeting Island Source: Alasdair Elmes/Unsplash Hosting the perfect party isn't about impressing your guests, it's about getting your guests feel comfortable and appreciated. You just want your guests to have a good time, don't you? When your guests are happy, you can truly enjoy your own party. With little planning in advance, you can pull off the perfect party while keeping your chill vibe. Invitations Before you delve into party planning, you'll want to book a few invitations. Of course, you can always send Evite, but there's nothing like an old-school paper invitation to make your guests feel special. This design from Amazon is printed on a 120-pound 14-point bright white matte stationery card. These invitations are in line with the Forest Management Council (FSC) and the Sustainable Forestry Initiative (SFI). Card livestock is created from 10% of post-consumer material. Envelopes printed with your return address are included in the room rate. You can personalize both front and back and even include some photos if you like. If this style isn't your cup of tea, you can download your own design. Invitations to cards your guests with love to receive these stylish invitations by mail. Food is an important part of any party. You can have your party catered for if the budget allows, but if you're going to do cooking, the key is to make it easy on yourself. Cook and bake as much in advance as you can, so in the moments leading up to the party (and during the party) you relax with a glass of wine without running around with a pizza mitt. Another party tip is that guests love neat finger food. We're as amazing as your aunt Polly's pie, guests don't want to slice into something and have their numb ooze all over the place. Instead, displaying a tiny bite-sized fare attractively on a ply. Guests will be popping your treats right in your mouth, no mess, no hectic. The ultimate finger food available in both kindle and soft form, this recipe book is choc full of amazing little batch food. Like food, if you can make your drinks in advance, you'll have a lot more time just to enjoy your party. Instead of playing bartender all night, whip up a few packet cocktails, slap on labels explaining each drink, put out some glasses and you're all set for the night. It's important to provide fun drinks for both your imbibers and designated drivers, so offering both cocktails and moccails a nice touch. Before your party, put together a good playlist tunes so you can just customize the music to play all night without to give him an opinion during your party. You know your guests and the types of music they like, so try turning on something for everyone. Of course, you want a good quality speaker so everyone can hear the music. Ultimate Ears Boom 3 is portable, so you can move it from room to room. It's also IP67 waterproof, so in case it somehow ends up in a pool or punch bowl (I don't know how wild your parties get!), it'll be fine. Alternatively, you can pair multiple Ultimate Ears speakers together for the full surround sound experience. If this speaker is not what you are looking for, we have other favorites from which to choose. All around a large speaker Use this portable Bluetooth speaker alone or connect it to other Ultimate Ears speakers and fill your home with music. You can really set the stage for a fun party by getting creative with your lighting. If you're using HomeKit-enabled lighting, you can create the perfect scene in advance, just install it and forget it. Not just for parties, light panels add a cool, modern touch to your home. Watch the lights dance to your music. You can play with millions of colors so it never gets boring, whether it's lighting up statements or lighting up the atmosphere. Nanoleaf's starter kit comes with nine panels, but you can plug in up to 30 panels in one system. A modular design can be created as you like. Hub not needed, it works with Amazon Echo, Google Home, Google Assistant, Siri, HomeKit and IFTTT. Party lights all the time your light panels will dance to the rhythm of your music. Control Nanoleaf with HomeKit or the digital assistant of your choice. It's worth taking the time to install some thoughtful seats before your party. Set up a few small conversational groups rather than just a perimeter around the room so your guests can get to know each other. You may need an extra seat, so this is a good time to pick up some quality, comfortable but fairly priced folding chairs. I have four packs of Cosco chairs myself and they pull out for every party and come together we host. I've owned them for so many years that I don't even remember buying them, but they're all still in perfect condition. High-quality folding chairs Stock up on an extra seat for your party with this comfortable and comfortable four-pack. The holidays come with an awfully long list of must-see fun: drinks with colleagues, gift exchanges with friends full of hors d'evry and sequin-corporate events. And while all these festivities make the season bright, they can also create a time crunch, leaving us rushing from one to the next without a spare hour for a leisurely cooked routine. If you find yourself just a few minutes away to prepare for the shindig holiday, here are some tips for getting the glee in a hurry. That's what introverts really want for the HolidayStop and smelling of bergamot. Not only the citrusy aroma of bergamot calls to mind a full glass of crisp white wine (yes, it can also alleviate anxiety in a hurry to prepare. Mice with elevated levels of anxiety ended up running through the maze showed a similar reduction in cortisol (stress hormone) after sniffing bergamot as those taking anxiety medication. Acute exposure to bergamot oil on anxiety-related behaviors and corticosterone levels in rats. Saiyudthong S, Marsden CA. Phytotherapy Study ; PTR, 2010, Nov.; 25(6):1099-1573. So while we don't necessarily react to things the same way mice do, if your holiday schedule has you feeling like a mouse in a maze, you can invest in some bergamot essential oil. Add a few drops to the scarf and rinse off a deep, relaxing breath to relieve stress before a crazy dash- and after too. Play your favorite feature. The full Kardashian-level outline, cat's eye and perfect red lip probably just won't happen if you only have three minutes to prepare. Instead, try focusing on just one feature, says Sally Biondo, an eco-makeup artist and hairdresser. Keep the look clean, but add one product that will give a bold result, says Biondo. Red lips or winged eyeliner are my favorite holidays. Select all-in-one. But going for a brave lip doesn't mean you have to let your lips and legs go naked. A pot of all-in-one blush and lip cream means you can get an all-over glow in just a few seconds. Biondo loves RMS Lip2Cheek ($36; Amazon), which is light enough to be used as blush but pigmented enough to be layered as lip color. It also comes in a wide range of shades, from deep burgundy to dusty nudes, for those who have found most all-ins a little too pink to their liking. Do not skimp on mascara. If your schedule allows only one or two cosmetics, mascara must necessarily be one of them. Curling eyeliers and adding two coat mascara that packs the punch as a benefit they are real! ($24; Sephora) or Yves Saint Laurent Shock ($29; YSL Beauty), is the absolute best way to add a bit of drama to another simple look. Hops in the shower. Most of us take hasty, just shaving to the knees of showers before starting our beauty routines, but Biondo's go-to-trick for party-ready is to shower after getting done up. One of my favorites is getting ready tips after you put on makeup, jump in the shower. Avoid soothing your face, of course, and when you go out, you'll have glowing, youthful skin. You'll definitely get tons of compliments on your skin at the next festive event! The pressure to party during the holidays can make fun feel full-time, and constant photo-ops (complete with follow-up tags on social media) mean extra pressure to look like a red carpet ready for every cocktail hour and get together on your Facebook invite list. Perhaps the most important beauty tip for season - remember the power of the downgrade button. Slowing down and coming of time to care for yourself is important all year round, but it becomes especially important during the holidays.
